

Just a Yard

Our precious green is guarded by a castle, some trees
the sea and the sky.

The angels that attend the green are always
there but rarely seen.

Strange language is used as squirrels
peruse

our attempts to be civil and smile when we lose.

As if!

We hear of lucky wicks, and "that's too
skinny" its enough to make you really dizzy.

"You've knocked me up" now there's a thing!

Measures made with elastic string.

Wrong bias, a term used to define what
will end up as a sop fine.

Usually met with loud derision that you have made a poor decision.

But with all its angst and all its pleasures,
after all life's just a measure.
